

The National Association of Reimbursement Officers, NARO, was founded in 1955 to provide a venue to exchange information for professionals involved in state and local government reimbursement operations for services provided to persons with behavioral disabilities. Our membership includes reimbursement professionals from institutionally-based services as well as community-based services. Our members deal with consumer financial screening, billing, health care financing, Medicare cost reporting, and payment policy matters. They represent a variety of disciplines including medical services, law, accounting, information technology and administration. Members have expertise in reimbursement policy and operations in a variety of subject areas including: Medicaid, Medicare, Supplemental Security Income, Social Security Benefits and private third party health insurance.

While many NARO members work for the state mental health agency, they also work for substance abuse agencies, MR/DD agencies, human service agencies and state finance departments.
